Since only about 40 members will actually visit the proposed Salt Lake sites, the bid committee has prepared a video presentation promoting Salt Lake to IOC members who don't make the journey, Korologos said.

The main concern expressed by IOC members while visiting the proposed host cities is the welfare of the athletes, Korologos said. They want to ensure athletes will be properly taken care of and Olympic venues will be easily accessible to them, he said.

As part of the agenda, local committee members will take visiting IOC members to tour the proposed Olympic venues, demonstrating the convenient distance from the airport to downtown and from the Olympic village to the ski areas.

WRONG KIND OF LIGHT: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints hopes its new campaign against smoking will help teen-agers see the light, rather than light up. A series of radio spots emphasizes the effect of family environment on teens' attitudes toward smoking.

Church fights teen smoking

Editor's Note: This is the second in a around the country three-part series on smoking and how it is affected by community and religious

> By MEGAN CHRISTOFFERSON Universe Staff Writer

Every day in America an estimated 3,000 teen-agers try their first cigarette, according to recent statistics provided by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The Church has launched an antismoking campaign targeted primarily at youth. The program focuses on the role the family plays in the decisions of young people to smoke or not.

The Church has sent public service announcements to thousands of radio stations and has also released three 30-minute public affairs programs.

"The Church obviously feels very strongly on the issue of smoking, Church spokesman Don LeFevre said. This anti-smoking campaign is part of a continuing series about issues of

"We have been for a long time concerned about health issues and educating the public," LeFevre said.

Radio spots will be broadcast at the discretion of the stations that received them. LeFevre said the Church has had a good response from stations However, KBYU-FM program

The radio spots are written from the perspective of teens. Different characters talk about why they smoke or why they don't smoke.

An underlying theme in the public service announcements is the idea that parents have a big influence on whether or not their children smoke. The announcements suggest that if parents smoke, it is hard for them to teach their children not to smoke.

According to the spots, the reverse is also true. If parents teach their children good Christian values, they are less likely to smoke Gerald Pond, of Church Public Affairs, said the spots were created to help teenagers make good decisions about smoking.

The purpose is to help people become aware of the relationship between family values and smoking, Pond said.

CIA director issues response to criticism

WASHINGTON — As the widows of two men killed in Guatemala listened ntently, acting CIA Director William O. Studeman denied involvement of the agency in the deaths. But key Senate Intelligence Committee members accused the CIA of misleading Congress.

Studeman also denied reports that the CIA increased funding for its clandesine programs in Guatemala to make up for President Bush's cutoff of military ssistance at the end of 1990.

In the first detailed response to criticisms of CIA ties to the Guatemalan military, Studeman acknowledged Wednesday that the CIA:

Failed to give Congress information it had in the fall of 1991 regarding the death of American innkeeper Michael Devine.

—Did not recognize the "potential significance" of information received in mid-1994 about the death of rebel leader Efrain Velasquez Bamaca.

Recalled its station chief in Guatemala in January after a key report was delayed for six days — "a management lapse," according to Studeman.

Keys left in ignition cause legal trouble

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah's Supreme Court has been asked to allow for exceptions to its ruling that Utahns who leave their car keys in the ignition are not liable for injuries caused by auto thieves.

Attorney Robert Sykes argued Tuesday that owners who could have predicted that a crook would take their car should be held liable.

Sykes is representing plaintiffs in a suit against Middlekauf Lincoln-Mercury, which had a policy of leaving keys in its cars during the day for the convenience of its sales staff. In 1992, an experienced car thief walked onto the lot and drove off in a car that had the keys inside. Hours later, while fleeing police, the thief ran a red light and crashed into the car of Francisco and Melody Cruz, seriously injuring them. Melody Cruz had been five months pregnant but the fetus did not sur-

Gingrich plays host to cockroaches, kids

WASHINGTON — There were hissing cockroaches in the elegant office of the speaker of the House today. They even crawled up Speaker Newt Gingrich's lapels, while a much larger animal perched atop his head.

"I won't mention which Democrat I was thinking of when I looked over and saw them," said Gingrich, R-Ga., after Columbus Zoo director Jack Hanna placed two of the hissing cockroaches, natives of Madagascar, on the speaker's

For Gingrich, a handful of Washington school children and a crowd of amused reporters, the speaker's lavishly appointed office in the Capitol building became a temporary petting zoo today as Hanna showed off some of his more exotic creatures.

A 50-pound black Binturong (or bearcat) named K.C. perched himself atop Gingrich's head, wound his tail around the speaker's neck and nibbled on a banana. Gingrich was delighted. His first dream, he confessed to Hanna, was to be a zoo director. Hanna said he was impressed by the speaker's knowledge of

Homosexuals outraged by UVSC cartoon

OREM — Some students say the atmosphere at Utah Valley State College in Orem is hostile toward homosexuals, citing a school newspaper cartoon on AIDS and athletes as an example.

The College Times cartoon depicted basketball star Magic Johnson and Olympic diver Greg Louganis and other athletes with AIDS. The caption said: "AIDS and the athletes who deserve what they got."

Cartoonist Jonathon Juvenal, said, "My intent was not to hurt any feelings. What I was trying to say is that when famous athletes contract the HIV virus through immoral actions, they only become more famous. We should be looking down on their actions rather than looking up to them."

College Times editor Tyson Lex Wheatley was cornered in a hall by several members of the campus' recently organized gay and lesbian club who demanded to know why the paper had run the cartoon. Two groups of students also complained to school President Kerry Romesburg.

Romesburg advised them to write a letter to the paper. Sixteen students later defivered the letter.

an effort to increase BYUSA participation among what Cowley called the few groups that are dissatisfied with BYUSA.

These plans included increasing student responsibility in BYUSA, addressing child-care needs of student parents, creating a student-mentor program for new freshman students and providing more opportunities for students to serve in BYUSA. During their campaign, Cowley and Hobbs received the endorsement of BYU's international and multicultural clubs in exchange for increased representation in BYUSA. After the election, Cowley's presidency created an associate vice-president position in BYUSA to serve as a representative of campus clubs.

Cowley and Hobbs also exchanged endorsements with Jeff Teichert, who was the student ombudsman at the time of the campaign. They pledged to support Teichert's proposal to increase the role of the ombudsman in BYUSA and to work closely with the Ombudsman Office. The proposal was implemented immediately when Cowley and Hobbs took office and appointed Denise Mundine as ombudsman.

In traditional settings and with measured tones, she ever-so-gently delivered a message to South Asia that she hopes will help to reshape its society - the notion that girls matter.

To see that this concept needs reinforcing, she had only to visit an orphanage in New Delhi where 80 percent of the abandoned infants were girls or a hospital in Dhaka where two-thirds of those lucky enough to get care were boys

Even as she avoided the diplomatic pitfalls of directly confronting governments over abuses of women, Mrs. Clinton put the spotlight on underlying issues of equality.

'We have to emphasize as much as possible that the denial of education, the denial of basic health care, the denial of basic choices to girls is a human rights issue," the first lady told reporters Tuesday as she looked back over her tour of South Asia.

Mrs. Clinton found plenty of allies during her visit to Pakistan, India, Nepal, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka, where vibrant private groups are well ahead of their governments in promoting opportunity for women.

Professional women who had overcome great obstacles and poor villagers seeking a better life for their daughters were eager to tell the first lady of their successes and their strug-

Students are quick to complain about Provo drivers, but a large number of those drivers are students.

There is a big difference when students leave," said Steve Baker of the BYU Traffic Office. "There is a definite difference in traffic and accidents when students are gone; everything quiets down.'

This may only reflect the sheer population decrease in the area, with BYU enrollment decreasing from almost 30,000 during fall and winter semesters, to 10,000 or 15,000 during the summer, Baker said.

Many say driving during the summer is much more pleasant.

"There's a lot less traffic when students are gone in the summer," said Judy Nelson, a resident of Provo for 30 years. "I look forward to driving then.

"It's beautiful," said Sharlene Dahl, a BYU graduate. "You can just drive down the road and not have to be so cautious."

Some say they feel students affect Provo's traffic in other ways than just the number of drivers on the road.

"There are a lot of out-of-state drivers who don't know where they are going," said Jodie Thatcher, a junior from Portland, Ore., majoring in graphic design. "I think it's that way in any college town.'

Students also may be less cautious than other drivers, some say.

Don't reward players for their selfish strike s many students head for home at the end of April, there are those from America's larger cities that will be tempted to attend a major league base-

Bad idea. Don't do it. It's a temptation that can be resisted and overcome this

Last time we checked, baseball was caught up in an eight-month strike and the only remote possibility for it to end was in a courtroom, not on the bargaining table where civilized people settle labor disputes.

Last week the National Labor Relations Board pleaded their case in court and Judge Sonia Sotomeyer ruled that the owners had to restore the old system, and suddenly baseball was back. Owners didn't even bother to vote to lock the players

Why should any of us care? The players snubbed us fans, abandoning 921 games and the World Series under the new playoff system. We shouldn't support them at the turnstile. As an editorial in USA Today said: "the whole seamy spectacle confirms that greed, not baseball, is our national pastime."

Meetings between the Major League Baseball Players Association representative and Union Chief Donald Fehr and owners' representative and Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, were at a virtual standstill. Basically there were no meetings and no talks. In fact, so bad was the relationship between the owners and players that it looked like they were set to sit this thing out for the entire 1995 season and probably more — until the court ruled against the owners.

With last season's bats as hot as they had been in 25 years and the elusive .400 (Tony Gwynn) mark being threatened for the first time in over 50 years, poof the season was gone. Gone because some millionaires were fed up with other multi-millionaires' proposals to bring baseball down to earth with a salary cap.

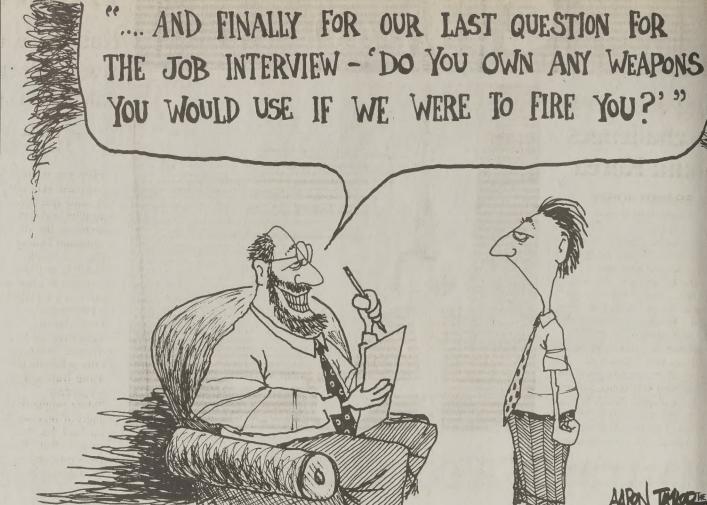

The real battle exists between the smaller, less profitable markets (Milwaukee) versus the larger, extremely profitable markets (New York, Los Angeles). It's a problem that the owners could work out by having a profit sharing plan among major league baseball teams like the NHL, the NBA and the NFL.

A recent article in Sports Illustrated on solutions to the baseball strike proposes a 'lose-lose" situation, meaning that both sides should give something up. The owners need to accept some of the players' proposals of arbitration and the players need to accept a salary cap. It's called compromise. There is still no agreement, and players could still strike, or owners could still lock out players.

Let's make sure that owners and players feel who has been truly hurt here — the fans — and not show up at the ballpark. Except maybe at the little league parks.

Photographer learns eye-opening lesson

By Matt Day

Something is definitely wrong here. I haven't seen a letter to the editor about nude art in the HFAC for weeks. Where are you people anyway?

It's time to strip the facts bare. I, too was once a member of The Uneducated and Blind Criticism Council International (UBCCI). That is, until my eyes were opened and the veil (of clothing) was lifted from my

It was June of 1991. As an employee at the Santa Fe Photographic Workshops in New Mexico, I filled out papers, ran errands and cleaned classrooms in exchange for the cost of attending classes taught by worldreknown photographers. I was young and innocent. Yet despite my naive and sheltered Utah background, I was

But my happiness was an ignorant happiness and little did I know as I left my home in south Draper that I was destined to leave my innocence behind as well.

I avoided the naked classroom like the plague. But I have to admit that I was a little curious. How do they justify that as art? I wondered. Is that just a classroom of 20 perverts or what? And what about those models, don't they feel ashamed or embarrassed? I mean, they're naked.

Satisfied with my modest, clean, and non-thought provoking dress, I never ventured into the unknown world of naked people. Neither did I do so much as to even speak with those who chose to photograph them. But fate would have it otherwise.

You see, whether you paint or photograph naked people, you have to have some privacy. Yeah sure, we're animal enough to hang up the finished products in public, but to actually produce them in public is a revolting thought.

It just so happened that the house of a good friend, with whom I was staying at the time, on the outskirts of town was the exact kind of privacy the instructor was looking for.

It was a Thursday. The ti approximately 4:58 pm. I was returning home from work to get my camera so as to photograph during the entire evening. As I made my way up the drive, something was different. Cars and people crowded the lane. But still, I was clueless. I approached the front door. Boldly, I marched in.

Liberal programs help

I would rather be a liberal Democrat and follow the spirit of the law, even charity tolerance and compassion than a strain-at-a-gnat, selfish "Rich Young Ruler" reeking of Republican conservative

The disadvantaged need a voice to help them cultivate their stewardship. This liberal voice advocates providing government intervention that potentially enforces the ninth and 14th amendments' unenumerated rights.

Such legislation that provides funding for programs that offers up a hand instead of a foot in the back is the Christian thing to do. President Clinton and Sen. Ted Kennedy, etc., have proposed such

Such help was denied by the bought-and-paid-for, filibustering conservative politicians that believe that corporate America's right to trickle down will overcome the rich person's selfishness.

President Clinton cares about people and believes in doing something to cultivate and protect human rights. Selfish and viscous people have misquoted, accused, used isolated incidents and spread rumors about leaders ever since time began (study Shakespeare, Joseph Smith).

Their very meanness and purpose betrays them for what they are: deniers of knowledge and seekers of power and recognition.

Finally, two women (who claimed to be leaders in BYU's College Republicans) challenged Rafael and I to a debate/discussion about the predatory and selfinterest promoting formula known as Contract With America. We said we would, and it was supposed to take place in March. This challenge came in January. What happened?

I'll repay BYU — later

As an April 1995 graduate, I have recently been besieged with pleas to "repay BYU" by hopping on the bandwagon of the Student Alumni Association's Senior Pledge program.

I am fully aware that 70 percent of my tuition came from outside sources and that I have received one of the best tuition deals in the nation. I am and will be forever grateful for this assistance, as I could not have afforded to attend college otherwise.

All that said, you would think I would be more than happy to pledge $95 over the next three years. Well, I am not, and I will tell you why. First of all, money is a little scarce. Secondly, I don't like someone telling me how much I have to or should donate to BYU and providing a schedule for when I must pay my "donation." Finally, I am tired of being

The letter to my home I could handle. The myriad of guilt trip letters to the editor and pleas in the paper, overdone as they are, are almost too much. What drove me over the edge, however, was getting an extended, pushy phone call during the one hour I have at home for dinner, where a calm, simple "no" does not seem to suffice as an answer!

I simply will not commit myself to giving money I do not have, no matter how much you offer to "let" me reduce my "donation." What part of "no" don't you understand? Give it a rest! When I am sufficiently settled and established, I have every intention of sending as generous of a donation as I can manage to the Chemical Engineering Department at BYU, but not before then. With all the counsel to stay out of debt, please quit asking me to indebt myself to this University. Besides, the more you push, the harder I (and I would venture to say a good portion of the other seniors) want to pull, and the less we will be inclined to donate anything. We are not ungrateful. We would like to help out, but we just want the chance to get the job and earn the money our degree has qualified us for before we start pledging money Korrie H. Bastian Hamilton, Mont.

I do offer one bit of advice to the Universe writers. Remember that there are people outside of BYU that read this paper. They may not realize that your title refers to EDITED R-rated movies because they were only referred to as R-rated movies. While some people believe that even an edited R-rated movie is still R-rated, 85% of the people polled do not believe this way. In the future please report the whole truth, even in your headlines. This headline sounded like it was off a BYU tabloid. Keith Brown

Not all women want work

I am interested in affirmative action in respect to hiring women. Clearly affirmative action supports an agenda designated to promote women in higher levels of management. I am not opposed to women in high-level management, if the hiring or advancement decision is based on skill or merit.

However, my wife and I decided that for personal reasons our family needs a mother at home to raise our children. We feel a strong need for a good, wholesome home environment that we cannot achieve without a parent at home. I know many other wives and husbands make this same decision or their families. Of course, the number of women eligible for and desiring higher management positions decreases by such decisions. My concern is that affirmative action supports an assumed philosophy that all women want to be in the workplace competing for higher management opportunities. My wife and I, as well as many other couples, are examples of citizens opposed to this philosophy. It is clear to me that present policies overlook the fact that many women want to stay at home. The implication is that the omission skews the numbers used to determine how many women must be promoted to obtain a balance. However, the result is that rather than equalizing the number of women on higher management, it imbalances the number. What aggravates me about the current policy is how it forces its philosophy onto those of us who do not support it; in fact, it uses us as a statistic to further its cause. It is my opinion that to maintain fairness one ought to hire on the basis of merit, not gender. Mark D. Mason

Gun laws ineffective

What is this? Is the editorial staff of the Universe going liberal? I was shocked to read the opinion in the Feb. 17 issue about the state legislature enacting laws to prevent local gun control ordinances. The Utah Legislature obviously knows that local gun bans don't work! The only people they take guns away from are the honest, law-abiding citizens who have them for recreation and self-protection.

If gun controls work, as liberals say they do, then let's consider the case of Washington, D.C., the hand gun murder capital of the world. As a nation, we should be outraged to think that all these murders are being committed by crooked cops. After all, that's the only real explanation for all those killings, right? Because the city of Washington has total gun control! It is illegal to possess any kind of firearm in the city unless you are a cop. So naturally, it must be all these cops that are committing the murders. Makes sense to me.

This is the insanity behind gun control. You can take away my guns, but you'll never get them from the real bad guys. And no matter how hard you make it for me to get one, it will always be easy for someone else to steal it from me.

No, gun controls are not the answer, and I applaud the Utah Legislature for realizing that. Society is the problem, and, unfortunately, no one has quite figured out a liberal cure-all way of fixing it. Just don't punish the masses for the evil actions of a few.

Honor code not scripture

After reading numerous articles about the Honor Code, we have come to a frightening realization: Either a minority of students are taking up a lot of our newspaper space or the majority has a difficult time discerning between scripture and the Honor Code.

To clear the air, we have come up with three easy steps that you can do at home on your own time that may help to clarify this Honor Code issue

1. To those who proudly wear the banner "Christ looks on your heart and not on your outer appearance," congratulations. You are living proof of what BYU's religion classes teach. Now that you are into your scriptures, look up a few on honesty and

Experts say self-sufficiency needed

Nutrition education, worldwide support will assist in growth

By THIRA SCHMIDL Universe Staff Writer

International efforts need to be made to increase self-sufficiency in families, said specialists in horticulture, education, and family science, and the director of the Benson Institute at a symposium Thursday.

The presentations were part of the "Families in Crisis Symposium" in the Herald R. Clark Building which is sponsored by BYUSA as part of CARE Week.

Dan Wooley, a horticulture researcher at the University of Missouri, shows and tells people how to run self-sufficient family farms by raising fruit and vegetables in their

"More people would not have to be hungry if they would just grow their own food, but they need to be taught how to do that," Wooley said.

He said even simple information like planting closer together or adding fertile soil on top of rock-filled dirt can increase the harvest considerably.

Paul Johnston, director of the Benson Institute, said it is important to first survey the human needs that are present in the countries before

'We are setting up a Family Self-Reliance Program with the help of various technicians like agronomists, animal scientists, nutritionists, nurses and home economists," Johnston said.

He said the Benson Institute is surveying Vitamin A deficiency in Guatemala.

"We will try to correct the deficiency through family garden projects, where we teach people to grow plants they do not customarily grow, so we can help them to improve their nutrition," Johnston explained.

Some of the other focuses of the Benson Institute are to improve the sanitary facilities in Central American countries by building latrines, to encourage the people to conserve wood by using special ovens and to do away with false nutrition beliefs.

'We encourage them also to breastfeed their children longer and we teach them the relationship between the disposal of human waste and disease," Johnston added.

He said the Benson Institute not only concentrates on research, but also on education of both children and

"We sponsor schools financially by providing books, desks, chairs, latrines, etc., to support literacy programs," Johnston said.

Carol Lee Hawkins from BYU's College of Education, said it is important to be open in order to learn from the people in the Third World countries when helping them.

"There used to be the so called empty-vessel theory saying that developed countries go out to help under-developed countries, and it assumed that the developed countries knew what the people in the Third World countries need," Hawkins said.

Hawkins stressed the importance of getting to know the people first and using their knowledge.

The BYU Studies office has recently published an organized bibliography of more than 1,500 writings about the New Testament and the life of Jesus

"We have tried to include all kinds of materials. It includes Devotional speeches and inspirational articles, as well as scholarly treatments," said Daniel McKinlay, the main researcher for the project. The work, entitled "We Rejoice in Christ: A Bibliography of LDS Writing on Jesus Christ and the New Testament," began last year in conjunction with the New Testament study in LDS gospel doctrine classes. The bibliography can be a valuable teaching tool for teachers and others in their New Testament study.

"Anyone interested in information about LDS writings about Jesus and the teachings of the apostles in the New Testament will find this bibliography especially helpful," said John W. Welch, editor in chief of BYU

Topics include miracles, parables, the Last Supper, the Resurrection, Peter, James, John, Paul, the birth and baptism of Jesus and the teachings of Nancy Lund, of the BYU Studies office, said the bibliography follows President Hunter's emphasis on studying the gospel.

"One of the most interesting aspects of this bibliography is the consistent and sensitive contribution of the late President Howard W. Hunter to this collection," Welch said.

The 42 sermons and articles by President Hunter make him the largest single contributor to the work

The publication is now available at Deseret Book and other bookstores. A free copy will be available as a bonus to all new BYU Studies subscribers until the end of April. Current subscribers will also receive a copy.

Do not decide on a summer job until you have spoken with us at Apex. Last year in Pest Control sales, individuals earned $12,000 dollars on average in just four months and some people made up to $50,000. This opportunity has provided hundreds of students the chance to go to school each year without having to work a job at the same time.

As a sales representative for Apex Marketing you are paid a high percentage of every sale that you make for Terminix Pest Control (our sponsor company). In addition to the sample pay scale shown below, we also pay our representatives $1000 to $3000 in daily weekly and monthly incentives, and a guaranteed draw during the summer.

If a sales representative sells 500 sales in 4 OR 6 months of work this summer, he or she will receive a free Honda Civic (in addition to the $50,000 they already earned). Come and see if you can earn the car! This offer goes for experienced sales people as well! Remember, there is a signing bonus for all current California pest control licensed representatives, so come on in and earn more with Apex!

Tarkanian to coach at Fresno

Associated Press

FRESNO, Calif. — Jerry Tarkanian, the towel-chomping coach with the highest winning percentage in NCAA basketball history, was hired Wednesday to coach Fresno State, his alma mater.

The former UNLV coach, whose disputes with the NCAA ran for years and reached the Supreme Court, replaces Gary Colson, who resigned March 15 after five seasons. Tarkanian was the only candidate to interview for the job.

Tarkanian, 64, will try to revitalize a team that has had only two winning seasons in the past 10 years. The Bulldogs were 13-15 last season, finishing seventh in the Western Athletic Conference

The choice of such a prominent coach excited many in the community, and a party for the public was arranged after the announcement to greet Tarkanian.

As a college coach, Tarkanian was known for quickly making losing programs consistent winners. Tarkanian compiled a 625-122 record - an .837 winning percentage during five seasons at Long Beach State and 19 at UNLV. He won the 1990 NCAA championship when his team, led by Larry Johnson, routed Duke by 30 points. When asked, before his hiring, whether he could lead Fresno State to a Final Four, Tarkanian said: "Final Four? My goodness. What I'd like to do is get the program to be cameos in several movies.

a national power. By that, I mean being able to compete with anyone on a given day.'

Tarkanian's ties to Fresno State basketball date to the early 1950s when he played for the Bulldogs. After his graduation in 1955, Tarkanian began his coaching career at a local Catholic high school.

Tarkanian said his connection to Fresno is the reason he wants to return to coaching. Despite his success, Tarkanian's teams were plagued by NCAA investigations involving recruiting and eligibility of players.

The NCAA placed UNLY on two years probation in 1977 and suspended Tarkanian for two years. He continued coaching and appealed the case to the U.S. Supreme Court, claiming the probation violated his right to due process

But the nation's highest court ruled against him in 1988, saying the NCAA was a private (agency and did not have to provide due process.

Tarkanian resigned three years ago when photos were published showing three former UNLV players in a hot tub with convicted sports fixer Richard Perry.

Tarkanian said he had told his players repeatedly to stay away from Perry.

Following a short stint with the San Antonio Spurs in 1992, Tarkanian spent his retirement hosting a radio sports talk show, giving motivational speeches and appearing in FINAL FAREWELL: Los Angeles Dodgers replacement players wave good-bye to fans after playing their final game Saturday night. The regular majorleaguers are back now and many of them are on the trading block as some teams begin a "fire sale" in attempt to get rid of high-salaried athletes.

High-priced players on the move

Opening day moved to April 25; Expos, Royals cut payroll by unloading top-dollar athletes

Associated Press

The great fire sale began in Montreal and spread to Kansas City as financially strapped baseball teams began to unload high-priced talent they can no longer afford.

The Expos, hoping to get their payroll down, traded bullpen stopper John Wetteland to the New York Yankees on Wednesday and then dealt staff ace Ken Hill to the St. Louis Cardinals. The Royals sent outfielder Brian McRae to the Chicago Cubs.

Meanwhile, owners and players agreed to move up opening day to April 25, a day earlier than their original deal, with the Florida Marlins playing host to the Los Angeles Dodgers at 7:35 p.m. EDT.

The American League schedule, barring rainouts, calls for Cal Ripken to tie Lou Gehrig's consecutive-games record on Sept. 5 at home against California. He would break it the following day at home against the Angels.

When Ripken would reach the record was calculated with help from a source who has Baltimore's schedule. The full schedule will be released this week when all teams have finalized their adjustments.

Friday should be a busy day in baseball. It is the date both to tender contracts to arbitration-eligible players and the date for each team to offer arbitration to its former players who became free agents last fall. If a free agent isn't offered arbitration, he can't re-sign with his old club until May 15.

And Friday also is the deadline for players - except non-U.S. citizens - to report to spring training.

Montreal general manger Kevin Malone said the Expos whose 74-40 record was baseball's best last season - said the team is not giving up, but is regrouping.

"This is not a fire sale," he said. "A fire sale is when you're giving guys away.

Still, the movement of players Wednesday and what is expected later in the week should be typical of the direction in which baseball is headed. The players agreed to return after a federal judge issued an injunction forcing owners to maintain the system of the expired collective bargaining agreement.

With the owners unable to get a salary cap and do away with salary arbitration, the small-market teams cannot afford high-salaried players. "The economics of the current system is the reason we're making the changes," Malone admitted. "These deals are financially motivated. Expos management has claimed it will lose $20 million because of the strike and is trying to pare its payroll to about $12 million - a drop of $6 million. Wetteland had 25 saves in 52 appearances for the Expos in 1994 and is considered among the top closers in the game. In return, the Expos got Fernando Seguignol, a 20-year-old outfielder and a player to be named later. Hill, 28, finished second in the National League Cy Young Award voting last season. He was 16-5 with a 3.32

The Cardinals gave up outfielder Darond Stovall and pitchers Bryan Eversgerd and Kirk Bullinger. Only

Eversgerd pitched in the majors last season. Malone said an undisclosed amount of cash from the trade with the Yankees, combined with the $2,225,000 from Wetteland's 1994 salary and the $2.55 million Hill made, would enable the team to sign some free agents later

Outfielder Marquis Grissom, who made $3.56 million last season and also is eligible for arbitration, could be dealt by Friday, Malone said.

"There are seven teams still in the bidding for Grissom," he said. "Other GMs are starting to call because they know now that I'm serious.'

Another Expo, outfielder Larry Walker was being wooed by the Colorado Rockies. Walker, who made $4 million last year, is seeking a five-year contract worth $25 million.

There were several signings, most notable among them pitcher Fernando Valenzuela joining the San Diego Padres for $200,000 and reliever John Franco returning to the New York Mets for $5 million over two years

McRae, 27, hit .273 with four home runs and 40 RBIs last season. In his four-year career with Kansas City, McRae has hit .262 with 30 homers and 248 RBIs. He was a first-round draft pick in 1985.

Are You Pregnant?

(Is it in your future?)

In September of 1992 the U.S. Public Health Service said all women who even might get pregnant should be receiving an adequate daily dosage of Folic Acid. From other studies we learn that birth control pills cause a deficiency in folic acid.

Folic Acid has been found to decrease the incidence of neural tube defects (Spinal Bifida & Anencephaly) when sufficient quantities are available prio to and immediately after conception and throughout pregnancy. The most crucial period is the first month of the pregnancy, before a woman recogniz

No. 5 and grabbed his back in pain after hitting his second shot. He walked to the green, picked up his ball and, after talking with tournament officials and one of his partners, Nick Price, hopped in a van to be taken for treatment.

"He's getting electrical stimulation and ice treatments," the golfer's father said. "They are prescribing rest for him so he won't be playing any more golf today. He needed the rest anyway.

"Back spasms happen a lot to young athletes. He'll be all right. He's just a little overworked."

Asked if his son would pay closer attention to his suggestions, the elder Woods, a former Green Beret, joked, "Fat chance that will happen. He's a great kid and doesn't really disobey me. He just physically stretched it to the limits this time. My biggest fear since he was a little boy would be that he would hurt himself.

"I remember in a tournament at Lake Nona, Fla., when he was 15, I had to hand rub his hamstrings because he was hurting," Woods said. "He's not physically mature yet. Mentally, he's a 30-year-old but physically he's still a teenager.

"He'll be ready to go."

The Stanford freshman became the youngest U.S. Amateur champion in August 1994 when, at age 18, he made a stirring comeback at the Tournament Players Club at Sawgrass

Kobe officials see new urban vision KBYU to rebroadcast general conference

Associated Press

KOBE, Japan - City officials have a new vision for earthquake-ravaged Kobe: Tear down crowded, squat apartment buildings and businesses and redevelop the area with high-rise apartments, wide roads and green

For Akitoshi Yoshida, his dream for the future is to return to life the way it was before his neighborhood was devastated by the Jan. 17 earthquake.

Surveying the rubble of the bathhouse he ran for 43 years, Yoshida says all he wants is a new bathhouse, built on the site of the old one.

He'll give authorities the land, throw away the pride of being master of his own place, if only he can once again stand at the door and call out "Irasshaimase!" — "Welcome!" — to people stopping by for a hot bath.

"I'll work for a monthly salary," said Yoshida, 65. "You build it, I'll work

In Kobe and neighboring areas ruined by the earthquake, thousands like Yoshida dream that life could somehow return to the way it was.

City planners want to move on. The emerging debate has highlighted old and painful themes in Japanese urban development. Cities tend to be ugly, cramped jumbles that give little sense of planning. The powerful have historically dictated how cities are built, with little initiative taken by cit-

Tetsuo Tamai, a city planning historian at Chiba University, said Japan still suffers from the lingering mental-

DREAM FOR THE FUTURE: An earth mover works on a massive mound of earthquake debris located on a Kobe city soccer field in downtown Kobe, Japan in January. City officials seek to redevelop the area in a more modern fashion, but residents just want to restore the city and return to life the way it was before the earthquake.

ity of the medieval castle town, whose shape would be dictated by the local

"The people on top make the plans, and force the people on the bottom to live according to them," Tamai said.

Finding a new way in Kobe will not be easy. Efforts to impose a new urban vision have not been welcomed so far. Protests broke out in mid-March as residents denounced the Kobe city government's approval of a development plan for five key areas devastated by the quake.

Many prefer to rebuild their hodgepodge neighborhoods, instead of making way for new apartments, better roads and parks.

Even before urban renewal can begin, legislators will have to revamp old laws that restrict land use, zoning and construction. One of the biggest hurdles is ownership of land, which is

Organ donors needed; 35,000 wait patiently

By JANNA NIELSEN Universe Staff Writer

An estimated seven to eight Americans die each day due to the shortage of available organs for life-saving transplants, according to the Intermountain Organ Recovery System (IORS).

Right now there are just over 35,000 (people) on the waiting list and another person is added to the list every 20 minutes," said Danny McMahan, senior procurement at IORS.

BYU students have the opportunity to become organ donors this week by signing a card at the booth in the ELWC Step Down Lounge.

Organ donations only total about 4,500 each year, McMahan said. This is a small number compared with the large amount of people who are eligible to donate Organ and tissue donors can range from newborns to 65-yearolds, he said.

Even if someone has a disease which has damaged one organ, other undamaged organs can still be used, he said.

The biggest problem is that people do not understand how easy it is to become an organ donor," said Deen Vetterli, executive director of the National Kidney Foundation of Utah.

"It's amazing how many lives can be saved by just signing an organ donor card," she said.

The one thing people should be aware of when they sign the card is the importance of telling family members they have become organ donors, she said.

In order for a transplant to occur, the hospital must have consent from the next of kin, even if a donor card has been signed, she said.

"If family members know how you feel, they will be more likely to comply with the circumstances that could occur later," McMahan

The family of the donor is not responsible for the expenses of transplanting organs or tissues, and a normal funeral is still possible, he said.

'Donation is a gift of life," Vetterli said.

Knowing the deceased family member gave an invaluable gift to another person often helps the donor families in the grieving process, she said.

Transplant recipients often lead active, normal lives after receiving transplants, Vetterli said.

Kidneys, livers, pancreases, hearts, lungs, eyes, bone marrow and tendons can all be successfully transplanted, ne said. "Acceptable organ donors are those who are brain dead (brain function has ceased permanently), but whose heart and lungs continue to function with the use of artificial life supports," according to information released by the National Kidney Foundation.

Most religious groups, including The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter day Saints, do not disapprove of organ donations, McMahan said.

The Church has issued the following statement in its General Handbook of Instructions:

"Whether an individual chooses to will his own bodily organs or authorizes the transplant of organs from a deceased family member is a decision for the individual or the deceased member's family. The decision to receive a donated organ should be made with competent medical counsel and confirmation through prayer. Representatives from BYU's chapter of the Public Relations Society of America will be at the booth today through 4 p.m.

Police claim foul play after eating spicy eggs

Associated Press

LEBANON, N.H. — A breakfast cook at a Denny's restaurant was charged with assault for allegedly spiking two Vermont state troopers' eggs with Tabasco sauce.

Michael Towne, 20, could get up to two years in jail and a $4,000 fine. Troopers Timothy Clouatre and Michael Manning, who had crossed into New Hampshire for breakfast on Feb. 7, said the eggs burned their mouths and upset one officer's stom-

Towne claimed that the hot pepper sauce must have been left on the grill from an earlier order, police said.

Towne was arrested three weeks after the incident.

"We've got enough trouble without people screwing around with our food," said Lebanon police Lt. Ken Lary.

In court papers, police quoted an unidentified witness who claimed to have seen Towne put a large amount of Tabasco on the food. The witness "said that Towne did not like police officers and did it as a joke," police

Towne's trial is set for June 6.

Juror dismissed from Simpson tria

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A sixth person was dismissed from the O.J. Simpson jury today, cutting the alternate pool to only six for a trial that seems to have months to go.

No official reason was given for the ouster of the 38-year-old black woman. However, news reports said she may have had a past experience with domestic violence that she failed to report on the jury questionnaire.

The woman, an employment interviewer who works with at-risk youth and is married, was replaced by a 44year-old single black woman from South Central Los Angeles.

The jury still has nine women and three men; eight black, three white and one Hispanic. There are now five single jurors, four married jurors and three divorced jurors.

The replacement juror said on her questionnaire she fixes computers at the Los Angeles County Superior

She was surprised at hearing Simpson was a suspect and said she would have no opinion of him until "I have seen the evidence in this case."

If the number of jurors drops below 12, the trial can continue if both sides agree, or a mistrial would be declared. The juror change apparently helped produce a 70-minute delay before the trial resumed with Dennis Fung, a police evidence technician, taking the stand for a third day. His testimony was slow and contentious, with lawyers often objecting and conferring before Superior Court Judge Lance Ito.

In his cross-examination, defense attorney Barry Scheck peppered Fung with questions about the experience level of co-worker Andrea Mazzola. 'Would it be fair to call her a rookie in processing crime scenes?" Scheck Ito sustained a prosecution objection, explaining: "There have been rookies of the year who have been

Fung, who earlier took credit for collecting most of the blood evidence, acknowledged Tuesday that he withheld from the grand jury the information that Mazzola handled the bloody glove and knit cap found at the crime

Scheck pressed Fung further today about why an "entry-level person" collected almost all of the blood samples from the crime scene as well as from Simpson's estate.

"The prosecution sort of shot itself in the foot in several different ways," said UCLA law professor Peter

CRIME SCENE: Neighbors and Los Angeles police officers outside the condominium belonging to Nicole Brown Simpso wife of football star O.J. Simpson, in June of last year. In the one trial of O.J. Simpson, accused of murdering his ex-wife, a sixti has been dismissed. If the number of jurors drops below 12, it be grounds for a mistrial.
